

I am so sick of telemarketers using my personal communication device as a tool to insert themselves into my private life. My home is my sanctuary, and I have a constitutional right to defend it with deadly force if need be. To allow these shameless profit driven idiots the right to abuse my utility is absurd, especially when I pay as much to the FCC every month as I do to the phone company. What is that FCC subscriber line charge paying for? You are making as much money from me as the phone company is, and I think it behooves you to protect the people who pay those charges from unwanted, uninvited invasions of their privacy. Any questions? Feel free to contact me.
